

My Voice in Democracy

Hello, this is my place in democracy. I wanted to talk about this because kids like me can persuade their parents to vote for who they want, not really though. We can also vote for stuff in school. Some examples are for sports in p.e, and events as well. So that's just the beginning.

Now to expand on the topic, unfortunately I am twelve years old so I can not vote yet. But when I can I will have a powerful voice in democracy. I know that because everyone can have a say, especially when it comes to voting, even the poor should be able to vote for our president.

Speaking of voting, voting is very important in our country. The voting does determine the president, after all. Because of the importance of voting I hope to vote once I'm eighteen years old. In my opinion, I like the electoral college because voting shouldn't be so simple, so I am happy that it is not a popular vote, because if it was terrorists could force a region to vote for a specific person.

To be honest, we are lucky to be able to vote because of our freedom. There are some places in the world where the people have no control over who their leader is. So I am very glad we have our independence. I feel sorry for them since they can't control who their leader is.

So we've gone over my say, how we are lucky to be voting, and how voting is very important in our country. In conclusion, even though I can not vote, I still have a voice in democracy. It's the same with everyone else, we all have a voice in democracy. And that is my and a lot of people's voices in democracy.