

My Voice in America's Democracy

America is the most free country where people are ruled by the elected and people can speak out amongst anything. Instead of having a royal family or chosen person to rule the country, we take a month to place votes for one of two candidates. Even though I am too young to vote, my voice still matters. My voice includes other peoples voices, my parents voices, speeches, protests, and boycotts. With mine and other people's voices anything could end or begin.

If I could change things in America I definitely would. I would make people worship God and live a life for him without sin in it. I would make it illegal to change your gender, ethnicity, or the gender you "like. If people were worshipping God, the number of deaths and tragedies would go down. If people were worshipping God, it would be illegal if you didn't have a Bible in your home. Each person would need to donate at least $100 or more per month to the church.

As a kid in America my voice isn't as loud as other adults' voices and I can't do much about that right now, but I could still listen and steer myself in the direction I have to be going to make a change. As long as I'm listening and being aware of what's happening in America I will be fine. Currently I am pushing myself in that direction. I understand that there are elections going on right now between Donald Trump and Kamala Harris. If I could vote I know who I would vote for. When I'm the age I need to be, I will vote for whoever I think is the best for our country's needs.

I'm aware that there are bad things happening in other cities and states like the Bio lab fire and the two hurricanes that came and hit Florida. My voice isn't as large as it needs to be to change the way we prepare for these natural disasters, but when it is, that is something I would do. I have been aware of the prices going up for the past multiple years. I think the economy is one area my voice could be heard in in the future.

I think America is the best country anybody could have. I also think it could change a lot. My voice can't do anything about it right now, but it could convince others' voices to make change.
